I have a form with many of the form items being populated from an array from a database table. This array is being generated with php and is stored in a javascript variable. I set up the form with the item source to be an array but I'm getting the error - Unable to set properties on undefined. Here's my asp.net code: var arr = ; What I don't understand is this error doesn't occur when I use , but only with the javascript variable. I'm also using this same js variable to populate a different array when the user clicks submit. A: i found a trick: var arr = [], val = document.getElementById('id_of_the_control'); if (val) { arr.push
